oh god

Steve had a date tonight.

It had been quite some time since they had been on a real date. Real meaning one that wasn't just beer and make-out sessions at the quarry or Netflix and chill at Steve's house.

Today, they were going to watch the new Black Widow film that had come out that Wednesday but both agreed that Friday was a much more fitting day to watch the movie.

Afterwards, they were gonna drive all the way up-to Starcourt to get some good food or even just eat together at one of the smaller shops nearby. As they were both diehard Marvel fans, neither really cared about the food they were gonna eat afterwards, they just couldn't contain their excitement for the day of the movie to come.

Some could say it wasn't much to fuss about; Steve wasn't some.

He wore a three stripe, red and white zip-up polo shirt all the way open, paired with cuffed navy blue trousers, socks of course and the least worn pair of white trainers he had, hoping to «complete the look.»

It was now 5 pm and he was excited and even happier when he heard that familiar knock on his door - Billy.

“Steve, you ready?” he called from outside.

The man in question, grabbed his keys, wallet and phone then put them in his small, leather «man bag» and opened the door for his boyfriend to see him.

“Ready,” he said. “Hey.”

“Looking submissive and breedable Pretty Boy,” Billy said smoothly before he gave Steve a quick kiss on the cheek.

Steve was lost for words in all honesty. “What the fuck? I swear to god Billy, I’ll put screen time on your TikTok, you can’t just say this type of weird shit in real life.”

The other smiled in amusement as Steve went to lock the door.

“Whatever. Come on then, wouldn’t want to be late for the movie we’ve been waiting for for way too long, hm?”
